Mavs soccer returns to NCAA tournament for third year

UNO soccer will return to the NCAA Division II Final Four for the third year in a row—could the third time be the charm?

On Nov. 21, the Mavs downed Ashland University 4-0 off a pair of goals from both Anne Willrett and Beth McGill and ended Ashland's winning streak at 15.

McGill's first goal came off a penalty kick at 13:58, a goal that seemed to take the wind out of Ashland's sail.

"It was a fair call," Ashland Head Coach John Hall said in a press release. "It was unfortunate we conceded it, but I have no qualms, it was a penalty."

"That's going to affect a team one way or the other," added UNO head coach Don Klosterman. "You can bounce back and play hard or it deflates you. Maybe it

Less than six minutes later, Willrett picked up her first goal of the game, connecting on a cross pass from McGill at 19:21. Willrett's next goal came at 59:03 on an unassisted effort to the lower left corner.

"We knew exactly what we were up against," said Hall. "But their number 28 (Willrett), she had two chances and she scored two goals. If she's not an All-American, then there's something wrong with the voting system."

McGill tacked on an insurance goal off a pass from Ali Portell at 79:44. UNO outshot Ashland 12-10 and had a 9-4 edge in shots on goal.

Goalkeeper Amy Price made three saves for the Mavericks.

"Amy is an All-American," said Klosterman. "Look at the things she does, the way she directs the defense, how she runs it back there. She tells people where to clear balls."

The season was supposed to be a rebuilding season for the Eagles and they finished one shy of the Final Four and a 15-game winning streak.

"[UNO] has high quality players and they gave us a lesson and showed us what it takes to play in an NCAA Final Four," said Hall. "Sometimes you have a Cinderella season and sometimes you learn a lesson the hard way like we did. [UNO] is certainly worthy of going to Texas and I wish them all the best."

The Mavericks finished second in the nation in 2002 and lost in the semifinals last year.

This will be the second meeting for UNO and Metro State this season and the third all-time. The Roadrunners claimed a 5-0 win in the Mavs' opening game this season. The teams played to a scoreless tie in the 2003 season.

UNO students talk about STDs, staying safe

KRISTEN FUCHSER

Last year, the Nebraska Health and Human Services System reported individuals falling between the ages 20 and 24 had more sexually transmitted diseases than any other age group.

A survey was conducted at UNO's recent STD Awareness Fair, held on Nov. 16.

Out of the 133 students and faculty who completed the survey, over half of the males and females said they've had unprotected sex, according to Pauline Mburu, the diversity chair of SPO.

According to Marcia Adler, coordinator of UNO Student Health Services, the most common bacterial STD found at UNO is Chlamydia. The leading viral STD is herpes, found both above and below the belt, which can lead to cervical cancer and genital warts.

Adler adds that testing at UNO is much more user friendly now than it has been in the past. HIV testing no longer requires a painful blood sample; a urine sample is proficient.

As far as other STD testing goes, according to Adler, a gentle swab of saliva does the trick—A method that is both painless and quick.

More students are getting tested this year because it's free and convenient. SHS offers free STD testing Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

So what do UNO students think about STDs? To find out, three UNO students were interviewed.

Is college primarily a place for learning and studying, or is it more of a place to party and get laid?

"It depends on what year you are. But being a freshman, it's time to party," said freshman Chrissy Nohr.

Would you have the guts to ask your partner to get tested? What do you think is the main reason why college students have unprotected sex?

"Yes, I would definitely ask my partner to get tested. That way you know both of you are safe and won't have any doubt in the back of your head," said Andrea Maly, a junior. "I think the main reason why college students have unprotected sex is because they are just being lazy."

President/regent-elect Kraemer is ready to serve students of UNO

LORI STUHR

After a long and arduous journey of sleepless nights, campaign signs and weeks of waiting, Elizabeth Kraemer was officially named UNO's newest student body president/regent-elect on Nov. 4. Her official swear-in ceremony will take place on January 13, in the Milo Bail Student Center.

Kraemer is more than ready to take her position.

"I see an awesome opportunity to represent the students and to work with some really great student leaders," she said.

Kraemer has been a part of Student Government since October 2002, where she started her UNO Student Government career as a student senator for the College of Business. Since that time, she has completed two full terms as a student senator and also served as chair of the Student Relations Committee during the 2003-2004 school year.

Though she enjoyed her time as a student senator for the College of Business, Kraemer said that she has always wanted to really serve the student body as a whole. As student body president/regent, Kraemer believes she will be able to better accomplish this goal.

"That's what totally enthralled me about the position," she said.

With her past Student Government experience, Kraemer feels prepared to take on the part of student body president/regent.

"I've had a chance to sit and watch the styles of past president/regents," she said. Kraemer believes that past presidents have added to their roles by being more involved with the students or by being involved more closely with the Board of Regents.

"I think I can hopefully be a good combination of both," she said.

Kraemer believes that both she and her vice president-elect, Lamarr Womble, will be a good fit for their new roles because they are approachable.

"I think we are both people you can find a lot in common with," she said.

Because of this, Kraemer says one of her main objectives as president/regent is to get more students talking and bringing their concerns to her. She encourages students to bring her their opinions.

"I will do exactly what I can to help you because that's what my job is, to represent the opinions that are brought to me," said

Friday's Who's Who reception to highlight student activeness

UNO will host a Who's Who reception Friday in the Milo Bail Student Center Ballroom. UNO nominees for the 2004 Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges will be honored at the event. The UNO community is invited to attend.

Student honorees were selected on the basis of scholarship, leadership, citizenship, service to the university and potential for future achievement. A committee comprised of UNO students, faculty and staff selected the recipients.

This year's guest speaker is Carol T. Mitchell. A reception will be held at 2 p.m., followed by Dr. Mitchell's lecture.

Dr. Mitchell is an associate professor of science education at UNO and adviser of the Golden Key International Honor Society. She is well known for her efforts with the Banneker 2000 - a five-year, $5 million National Science Foundation grant in conjunction with the Omaha Public Schools that focuses on improving math and science education in the P-12 schools. This project is a collaboration between math and science faculties in education, arts and sciences, and K-12 schools. Dr. Mitchell is currently co-principal investigator for Banneker 2000:CEMS.

For more information regarding the reception, contact Sharif Liwaru at 554-2711.

Chris Wallace to headline today's ABC Breakfast

Fox News Sunday host Chris Wallace has led many ground-breaking investigations and is the recipient of several prestigious journalism awards. He will share his first-hand experiences as a senior news correspondent today, during the Academy, Business and Community Breakfast Speaker Series.

The event, sponsored by UNO, will be held at the Holiday Inn Convention Center, 72nd and Grover Streets. The doors will open at 7 a.m. for a breakfast buffet. Tickets are $12.50 and can be purchased by calling 554-2981.

Wallace is a former news correspondent for PrimeTime Thursday and was a frequent substitute host of Nightline. He has interviewed and profiled numerous public figures, including former President Bill Clinton, Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, film stars Jodie Foster and Morgan Freeman, golf legend Arnold Palmer and NBA great Magic Johnson.

His work has included a variety of investigations throughout the years on topics ranging from Australian safe havens for Nazi war criminals to waste and fraud in Medicare, food stamp and federal disability programs. Additionally, Wallace has led hidden-camera investigations that focused on gender bias, baggage theft on United States airlines, auto repair fraud and home appliance repair scams.

As a White House correspondent, Wallace covered former President Reagan's 1984 trip to China and four Reagan-Gorbachev summits. He also followed the 1980, 1984 and 1988 presidential campaigns and was a floor reporter for NBC's coverage of the corresponding Democratic and Republican conventions. Wallace was also the first network correspondent in 1980 to report on George Bush being named Ronald Reagan's running mate.

Among his many honors are a duPont-Columbia Silver Baton, three Emmy Awards, a National Press Club Award for consumer journalism, a Headliners Award, and two Investigative Reporters and Editors Awards.

The ABC Breakfast Speaker Series is celebrating its 30th season in 2004-2005 and is one of the nation's longest running speaker series. It is made possible through the support of attendees and the generosity of DLR Group/AIA, Northern Natural Gas, BlueCross/BlueShield of Nebraska and TIAA-CREF.

The next event, scheduled for Feb. 22, will feature national security expert Hugh Shelton.

Kraemer.

Kraemer has made plans to help ensure that the lines of communication are opened.

"I've set a goal for myself to meet 10 new people every day," she said. "I want to get to know where people stand on the issues, and the concerns they have."

She also plans to set up student forums on south campus as well as main campus so students can come and have their opinions heard.

"I want to go to the students," said Kraemer.

She also intends to make student opinions known among the Board of Regents.

"They are going to be sick of my face because I'm not someone that is going to hide in the shadows," she said. "I'm the UNO students' voice and I'm going to make sure it is heard."

To better accomplish her goal of increasing student communication, Kraemer plans to improve Student Government.

"I think there is always room for improvement, especially when you are considering student representation," she said. "I see a highly motivated senate. I want to keep that."

Kraemer says that she intends to make sure senators are more accountable for their actions.

"I want to remind them, (senators) that people look up to them, and see them in a certain light," she said.

"I want to ensure they are doing their job," she said. "The only way you can improve is by constantly working on it."

Since the election, Kraemer says that she has faced some opposition.

"A lot of people don't think I should even be in this position and I understand where they are coming from," she said.

In spite of this fact, Kraemer encourages those who don't agree with the outcome of the election to come to her with their complaints.

"I do not want the past elections to influence whether students come and talk to me," she said. "I'm here for them. I will devote 110 percent."

Passion for Fashion show a good cause

The place was packed. I had been fairly warned, I guess. The doors opened at 5 p.m. and the show started at 7 p.m. But why would I need to be there two hours early? Because there was nowhere to sit, or stand for that matter. That's why.

The Passion for Fashion show by Teez and Make-A-Wish at Club Nico was quite the extravaganza. The show, held on Nov. 20, featured clothes from several area vendors, including My Compulsion, Post and Nickel, Deniz and Nouvelle Eve.

According to guest Deborah Ward, of KMTV Channel 3 News, this was the best in fashion Omaha had to offer.

One of the coolest things in the show was how the music and background screen accompanied the various themes that the show was divided up into.

There were different categories such as "American Heiress and Bridal," and the title would flash on the screen with different graphics and music to fit the theme and the mood.

One thing I noticed about local models is that you get an attitude from them, and that really makes the show.

One of the funkier trends showcased was a man's suit jacket, worn by a woman with fishnet stockings and heels. There was also a lot of fur, mostly if not all faux I hope. Nobody wants to get PETA all riled up.

One predominant theme I observed throughout the show was layering.

Pretty much anything and everything can go together when worn with an attitude, as

I know I have stressed to you enough by now. But, really, you should have seen some of these outfits. So thrown together looking, yet so amazing! Come to think of it, I was kind of inspired while watching. I wanted to look like I had just stepped off that runway and onto the streets. They all just looked so perfectly put together in a funky, modern way. There were tutus and T-shirts, suitcoats and hotpants, and leggings and skirts. I could go on and on.

Luckily we are in the layering season with the temperature becoming frigid. An extra sweater or button up never hurt anybody.

The choreography really kept the viewers captivated. In one scene, a woman resembling Paris Hilton was brought out on a pillow by four scantily clad men. There were also a couple of dance numbers and, honestly, who doesn't love those? There was also a mini-drama wedding scene where the bride runs off with a tall dark stranger leaving her groom alone on the runway.

The hair and makeup in the show was trendy and altogether awesome. Big beautiful hair with dramatic makeup by Teez really was the cherry on top of a splendid show in my opinion. And the club itself was the perfect venue: trendy, upscale and modern.

The coolest part of it all? All the proceeds of the night went to the Make-A-Wish Foundation. Could you ask for anything more?

Is there an event coming up that I need to cover? Let me know at ammay@mail.unomaha.edu.

Hip-hop notes

COMMENTARY BY JULIAN IVEY
SEATTLE WRITER

•The hip-hop world lost one of its most energetic and original emcees when Ol' Dirty Bastard passed a couple of weeks ago. While you can be critical of many of his personal decisions, one thing that cannot be denied is his impact on hip-hop music.

Like his Wu-Tang Clan brethren, he was straight from the slums and he made this apparent. Dirty came with a unique style where he would do just about anything on an album in which his first solo album, Return to the 36 Chambers: The Dirty Version, gave light to his charisma.

Dirt Dog gave birth to an entirely new branch on the tree of hip-hop. He showed rappers they didn't have to take themselves so seriously and could relax and make self-expressive albums. There was no father to his style; he himself fathered many styles.

ODB was a visionary and always ahead of the curve in rap. Take his second album, Na Please, for example. At a time when most of the public had discovered the secret of the Wu-Tang, Dirty made the first album where production went outside of the Clan. He used little known up-and-coming producers, the Neptunes and Irv Gotti, for tracks.

Irv Gotti has made multiple hits for Jay-Z, Ja-Rule, Fat Joe and Ashanti, among others. The Neptunes have worked with everybody.

I always loved the guy because he was always himself and didn't attempt the change for anyone or anything. He would do slow songs before it was cool; check out "Good Morning Heartache."

He gave shout-outs to Eskimos, schoolteachers and would talk about STDs he acquired.

Whether it was Ol' Dirty Bastard, ODB, Joe Bannanas, Osirus, Dirt McGirt, Ason Unique, Russell Jones, Dirt Dog, Baby Jesus, Big Baby Jesus or Jesus, he will be missed.

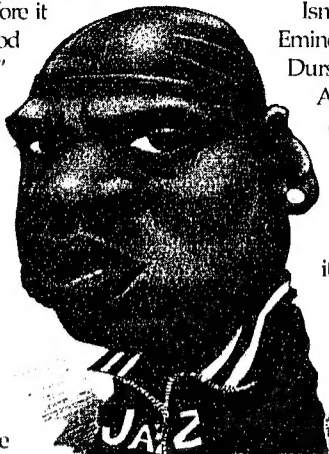

In the words of the immortal of Tupac, life goes on.

•Jay-Z may need to be known as collaboration king soon. Not only does he have the Best of Both Worlds follow-up CD and the project with Linkin Park, he also has a street mixtape with Nas, God's Black. Milio put it together. Check out Sandboxautomatic.com for more information.

•Eminem has had his fill on the beef with Benzino and The Inc. Records. On several shows, Slim Shady has talked about being bored with the verbal attacks and the effect it's had on the people around him.

Isn't it funny how Eminem can beef with Fred Durst, Everlast, Christina Aguilera and a million other people but when he starts playing with people that really beef, he waves the white flag? Remember folks, it is show business.

•Xzibit wants hip-hop to go back to its roots. The rapper has called for emcees to go back to politically conscious and rebellious rap and take the emphasis off of women and guns. This is pretty true to Xzibit's style and he should be showcasing this on his new album, Weapons of Mass Destruction, which should hit stores in the next couple of weeks.

•Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas features the voice of MC Eiht as the title character in the new game. It's good to see Eiht-hype back in the game after a long absence. He has also released a new album, Veteran's Day. It is said to be an unofficial soundtrack to the game.

•Goodie Mob's T-Mo and Khujo are about to drop a new album, Live in Like Lumberjacks. The album's first single, "Turn Your Whip," (featuring Big Hustle) is slated to hit radio in the coming weeks. In addition to guest spots by Big Gipp and Witchdoctor, the CD features production by Organized Noize. The Dungeon Family always comes with quality music.

•Everyone should go pick up an Ol' Dirty album and listen to it as you prepare for finals. It will definitely help you be easy.

Top five songs

COMMENTARY BY JOSH BASHARA
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

Top five songs to listen to...

...when you realize you're having a quarter-life crisis.

5. "Don't Know When But a Day is Gonna Come" Bright Eyes, Lifted

If there were such a thing as an emo power ballad, this song would be it. Omaha's own Conor Oberst offers this "What's the meaning of it all?" track that every band gets a shot at once in their career. Thanks to Oberst's melancholy voice set against a full orchestra and an epic, crashing crescendo, he succeeds.

4. "I Do Not Want This"

Nine Inch Nails, The Downward Spiral

There's something about industrial-rock guru Trent Reznor screaming out "I want to know everything/I want to be everywhere/I want to fk everyone in the world/I want to do something that matters" that makes you think, "Yeah, I know what he means."

3. "A Praise Chorus"

Jimmy Eat World, Jimmy Eat World

Any song that can epitomize the entire concept of living life for the moment in one verse or less deserves its place in this top five list. Strikingly familiar: "Are you gonna live your life wondering, standing in the back looking around/Are you gonna waste your time thinking how you've grown up or how you missed out?"

2. "Dream On"

Aerosmith, Aerosmith

Steven Tyler's siren-like vocals send a shockwave down even the most hardened cynic's spine on this track from the band's 1973 debut. Consider: "Sing with me, sing for the years sing for the laughter and sing for the tears/Sing with me, if it's just for today/maybe tomorrow the good Lord will take you away."

1. "Beautiful Day"

U2, All That You Can't Leave Behind

While it's a song that debatably encompasses the confusion and listlessness that accompanies pushing 25, "Beautiful Day" is one of those gems that has the unique ability to lift your spirits through thick and thin. Best listened to at high volume, on the road with the sun in your eyes.

Cumbee's movie commentary

Keeping you in-the-know on all things film

Movie goers: hypocrites?

COMMENTARY BY ANDREW CUMBEE
STAFF WRITER

Lately, there have been major changes in the film world. Our society has really taken huge steps towards getting rid of the crap that the industry forces on us.

But there's still something wrong. I feel like I need to say something about this. So come with me on my bi-weekly rant. This week I'll be mostly complaining about hypocrisy...hold on and I'll explain that more clearly. Also, I'd like to encourage readers to respond to this article at our Web site, www.unogateway.com. I'd like to hear what people have to say—tell me I'm wrong or tell me why you are one of the people that I'm about to talk about.

I finally got out to AMC to see Alexander Payne's new movie, Sideways. If you don't remember, Payne is that dude from Omaha. Yeah, the guy who directed Election and About Schmidt. So, anyway, the film is great. It's deep, it feels real. It has been nearly impossible to find another movie like this lately. And I'm gonna put myself out there and say that only one other film this realistic and emotional came out this year. Of course, that was Garfield.

Sideways is not necessarily fun to watch (although there are many parts that are exceptions). It's about two guys going through midlife crises. They're best friends and have two totally different lives, and two different outlooks on life.

So, the point of dragging Sideways into this column: National Treasure was No. 1 at the box office this week. I just saw the week's box office record and Sideways was 12. This got me thinking. Now I realize that Sideways and National Treasure are two totally different kinds of movies. In fact, National Treasure is on ten times as many screens in the United States. It has huge stars and a gigantic ad campaign that Sideways didn't get. But without a doubt, Sideways is the better and more important film. It's received almost no bad reviews. It's received recognition in film festivals. It's even won awards already. Most people that have seen it say it's the best movie this year.

And I know what some are thinking now: "You can't trust the critics." Really quickly, I'd like to say this type of thinking is wrong. As film has changed, so too, have critics. They had to adapt to please us. Look at it this way: their jobs wouldn't exist if we as a society didn't trust them and they didn't agree with us for the most part. I mean, Spiderman 2 got excellent reviews. They don't always tear apart popular films.

So...what the hell? Why did so many more people go see National Treasure, a film with one of the most insane plot lines in film history when a great film like Sideways was in theaters? Seriously, Killer Klowns from Outer Space has a more believable story than the treasure map on the back of the dollar bill thing.

I mean, all evidence in the past few years has shown that American film audiences are getting smarter. We don't just shell out money for those movies that look bad. Really, who saw the Tomb Raider 2 preview and thought it looked good? Big budget movies have bombed at the box office lately. But why is it that bad, expensive films can double their $200 million budgets, and great character-driven films have trouble making back their $15 million budgets?

I know that sometimes you just want a little entertainment. You don't want to think or leave the theater depressed. That's fine, even the most uptight movie goers (the ones that still call it the "cinema") want a stupid waste of two hours every once in awhile. The thing is, even those kinds of movies can be good. The Bourne Supremacy and Spiderman 2 were both like that this year...National Treasure, though?

Truthfully, I'm stumped on this one. From what I see, people hate most of the movies that they go to see in the theaters. So why go, then? Why not go to the "good" movies?

Film is in a new period. It's changing, like it always does. Right now, movies are getting smarter. They are becoming what they once were in the 1970s. It's getting back to that "art form" level. I don't know, though. Maybe we aren't ready for this new movement.

Personally, I welcome it. We can have "fun" movies...guilty pleasure movies. I'm not going to lie; I actually liked Seed of Chucky. But when they drown out the really good stuff—the classic, the new, the different, the true art of film—that's when we get somewhere dangerous.

The 1980s were a really bad time for American culture. Sure, looking back, that was a cool decade. But you know most people look back and laugh at those times, not with them. It was sort of like a mini-Dark Ages. Films were dumbed-down and they dumbed-down the audience. I think that lately, we've started to fight against this still prevalent movement. National Treasure opening at No. 1 at the box-office, though? That's a major step backward.

We're at a turning point. It really is up to us what kind of movies we will get in the future. Choose to see good films. See movies that will help you explore yourself and the art that can be in film. I would like to have better movies all around. I don't know about everyone else, though. That's up to you.

UNO picks up three points against Ohio State

ANGIE PECK
SPORTS EDITOR

Penalties, fights and at times really good hockey were all the things that could be found at the Qwest Center on Nov. 19 and 20 as UNO blanked and tied seventh-ranked Ohio State University.

The last time the Mavs picked up a home shut out was Jan. 24, 2003 when Dan Ellis held off OSU 4-0. On Nov. 19, UNO goalie Chris Holt picked up his first career shut out with a Mavs 4-0 victory over OSU.

The Mavs jumped on OSU early, picking up two goals in the first period. Alex Nikiforuk tapped in a nifty pass from Brandon Scero to give UNO the lead at the 6:07 mark. A little over a minute later, Bill Thomas scored with assists from Holt and Scott Parse.

The final two goals came in the second period from Kaleb Betts and Parse, each with a man advantage.

The game was marred by 150 minutes of penalties between the two teams.

In a game of comebacks, UNO rallied from a 2-0 deficit eventually taking a 4-2 lead over Ohio State, who then rallied to tie the Mavericks 4-4. The game ended with five-minute sudden-death overtime where no one could put the puck in the net.

Parse scored a pair of goals for UNO, which claimed three of four points in the weekend series with the Buckeyes.

Ohio State jumped out front 2-0 in the first period on power play goals by Rod Pelley at 9:50 and Tom Fritsche at 14:43. The Mavericks gained the momentum on David Phillips' fifth goal of the year, on the power play, at 16:22 of the first on assists from Kaleb Betts and Bill Thomas.

Brandon Scero scored his third of the year on a power play at 2:50 to tie, then Parse put the Mavericks ahead with two goals, one on a five-on-three power play at 5:47 and an even-strength goal at 14:30 in the second period.

OSU gained some momentum after UNO's Bobby Henderson was given a five-minute major and ejected for spearing at 16:10. The ejection gave OSU a five-minute power play and OSU took advantage of it, picking up Andrew Schembri's goal to cut the Maverick lead to one goal.

The Mavs killed off the remainder of the power play, but DeSantis beat UNO goaltender Chris Holt on an unassisted shorthanded effort at 7:04 of the third for his first career goal to tie the game.

The Mavs moved to 7-4-1 on the year and 5-4-1 in the CCHA. UNO's next action is Dec. 3-4 in a two-game series against Northern Michigan at Berry Events Center in Marquette, Mich.

Women's basketball goes 3-0 on break, dominate opponents

J. PARKER ADAIR
NEWS EDITOR

After a two-point loss at Nebraska-Kearney, the UNO women's basketball team has left no game in doubt. Wins of 21 (Rockhurst), 17 (Chadron State) and 16 (Winona State) have given the Mavs the longest streak since their last winning season, 1999-2000, when they opened at 5-0.

UNO came out early to take a 43-36 lead into halftime in the game against Rockhurst on Nov. 20.

The Hawks chipped the lead away to five before UNO pulled ahead for good. UNO was led by a three-player, 56-point effort. J.J. Smith (21), Karen Thies (20) and Andrea Schoepf (15 in 14 minutes) had three of the game's top four scoring efforts. Thies added five rebounds - as did Carley Jones - leading the game for the second game in a row.

In the home opener on Nov. 26, Smith and Thies came out hot again. Smith scored nine points in the first half, while Thies scored 10. Her six field goal attempts came from behind the arc. She added three steals.

With a 12-point lead at the half, Lindsey Peterson picked up by recording 13 points for a total of 19, leading UNO. Thies added eight more points and a game-high five assists. Sarah Austin and Jones combined for 19 rebounds in the 74-57 win over Chadron.

Saturday night's contest saw Lisa Carlsen back on the bench in Omaha since she resigned as head coach last year. Carlsen is now an assistant for Winona State.

Current UNO Head Coach Patty Patton Shearer did not want to let her team get involved in the emotional possibilities of the game.

"To me, it's just another basketball game," she said. "We're not going to prepare differently."

Smith said that it would be a little different, but it is still another game.

It appeared to be like the previous two games for UNO as it built to a 16-point halftime advantage. The Warriors pulled within one, but a 7-0 run aided the Mavs in running up a 21-point lead. UNO won 72-56 led by Smith's 19 point, five rebound, six-assist effort and Thies (16,5,5). Jones had six of her 11 points in the first four minutes. The team shot 61.5 percent from the field in the first half and 56.3 for the game.

Afterward, some of the players had the chance to talk to Carlsen.

With the win, the Mavericks are now 3-1 on the season with a home game at 7 p.m. tonight against William Penn. UNO hits the road this weekend playing Southwest Minnesota State on Friday and Wayne State (Neb.) on Saturday as part of the South Dakota Classic in Vermillion. The Mavericks then return home for eight of their next 10 games, including five consecutive before Christmas.

Kitchen sink defense puts men at 5-1 on season

J. PARKER ADAIR
NEWS EDITOR

After a loss Wednesday at NCAA Division I Colorado State, the Mavericks men's basketball team returned home Friday and Saturday to host the Thanksgiving Classic. An 18-point win over Truman State Friday set up a match with North Central Region opponent Colorado Mines.

Stephen Bahl dropped 50 points Friday night for the Orediggers in a double-overtime loss to South Dakota. UNO Head Coach Kevin McKenna knew that shutting him down would not be an easy task but it was imperative for the win.

"We're going to try to throw the kitchen sink at him," McKenna said Friday night. "I was hoping he would get it going tonight so he didn't feel the need to tomorrow."

Normally, Calvin Kaples would draw the coverage on Bahl, but he sat the weekend following a collision in the CSU game. The collision left him with stitches and a possible second broken nose in as many seasons. Jamaal Byers was another option, but McKenna elected to use swingman Andre Tarpley, arguably the team's best defensive player.

Bahl was held to one field goal in the first half with a three-pointer coming 12 minutes into the game. He added four free throws for nine first-half points. UNO held a 44-20 halftime advantage.

Bahl added 10 in the game's last seven minutes, sparking a rally that pulled the Orediggers within 11. UNO had too much as Tarpley matched his opponent with 19 points.

Abdul Mills scored 15 while Randy Bland and Levy Jones added 11 each.

The win brought the Mavericks to 4-0 at home, 5-1 overall. During the break, UNO scored wins over Midland Lutheran (82-60) and Missouri Valley (81-73). Kaples had 12 and 27 points in the two games while Tarpley added 11 and 12. The Mavs showed their deep bench with at least three players in double figures in each win.

Through six games, Kaples leads UNO with 14.3 points per game with Tarpley and Mills tied at 11.2. Mills has come off the bench each game, averaging less than 20 minutes per contest, giving him a team leading .567 point per minute ratio. Kaples is .504

Next, UNO will travel to Vermillion for the South Dakota Classic. The Mavs will play Minnesota State-Moorhead and Southwest Minnesota State Friday and Saturday respectively.

Minnesota-Duluth Ends UNO's season

ANGIE PECK
SPORTS EDITOR

After ending Augustana's season with a 3-1 victory, Nov. 18, UNO was swept away by Minnesota-Duluth in the NCAA North Central Region Volleyball Semifinals in St. Paul on Nov. 19.

In the first round of NCAA action, outside hitters Amy McLeay and Jenny Rankin combined for 38 kills and 23 digs to push the Mavericks past Augustana in four games (30-20, 30-18, 28-30, 30-27). The Mavericks led in nearly every statistical category in the match.

The last time the Mavericks made it to the NCAA tournament was in 1996. They left with a fifth place finish.

Seventh-ranked Minnesota-Duluth ended the UNO volleyball team's 2004 season with a 31-29, 32-30, 30-24 victory.

Juniors Ashley Freeman and Heather Hainline led the Mavericks with 14 kills each. Freeman registered a blistering .667 hitting percentage with no errors in 21 attempts. Hainline hit .478 while adding a match-high three blocks.

The Mavs outhit and out blocked Minnesota-Duluth, but nine service errors hindered the Mavs.

Petersen captured the 50-yard freestyle event with a time of 25.54 seconds and the 1,650-yard freestyle in a time of 18:02.14. Hessel won the 200-yard backstroke in a time of 2:17.45 and the 200-yard butterfly in 2:09.41.
